SCRANTON, DECEMBER 7, 1894.

THE SCRANTON OF TODAY.

Come and inspect our city. Elevation above the tide, 740 feet. Extremely healthy. Estimated population, 1884, 163,000. Registered voters, 20,339. Value of school property, $750,000. Number of school children, 12,000. Average amount of bank deposits, $19,000,000.

"A tax of $1 a barrel on beer, yielding $33,000,000, which the consumer would not feel, would have avoided all the difficulties in regard to revenue under which the treasury now labors; but to the Democratic financier beer is sacred. He prefers to tax, instead, the income of trust funds."—Philadelphia Press.

The Future of Silver.

Representative Hartman, of Montana, the Republican who on Tuesday introduced the first free-coinage bill of the present session, is quoted in a Washington dispatch as follows: "I do not see that anything would be gained by the passage of a free-coinage bill at this session, unless it would be the notice to the country that the sentiment in favor of it is still strong and growing. Any bill that would be passed would be sure to meet with Mr. Cleveland's veto. The same would be true in the next congress, as Mr. Cleveland will possess the veto power until the 4th of March, 1897. There is one thing of which I am thoroughly convinced, and that is the Republican party will take up this subject of silver in the next presidential campaign and when they come into full power in the Fifty-fifth congress they will solve the question just as they have every other important one that has been presented in the last thirty-five years. I believe that the only legislation favorable to silver will be secured through the instrumentality of the Republican party."

To Improve the Indian.

The organization of a society with the bettering of the condition of the American Indian as its chief object, is a worthy enterprise that should meet with the approval of all. It is indeed deplorable that in this land of freedom and supposed good government it should be necessary to work up public sentiment by a series of organizations in order to induce the government to perform its duty toward the remnants of a race that has for years been victimized by dishonest officials and lawless frontiersmen. An organization like that which has recently been in session at New Haven may accomplish much good in its way.

ALLISON'S AVAILABILITY.

From the Philadelphia Record. It is pointed out that he has his state behind him, and friends in every other state west of the Atlantic. He is well known further east; that he is, next to John Sherman, the leading Republican senator; that he has taken no decided part in any of the tariff fights within the Republican party, but, on the contrary, has always been on excellent terms with all factions; that of all prominent Republican statesmen he has, on the whole, occupied the position on the tariff question which best suits the majority of the Republican party, as well as the majority of the country today, never having been a high protectionist, although he has bowed to his party's will in this as in other matters and has made ambiguous declarations in his speeches at times which might have been construed as indicating an acceptance of McKinleyism, while on the silver question he has more dexterously than most other public men maintained the idea of bimetallicism without offending either the east or west. They add that at 65 Senator Allison is in remarkably good health and mind, looking and talking and acting as though he were ten years younger than he is, and having a grace and dignity, a memory for names and faces, a felicity in writing and speaking and a life-long experience with public men and affairs most desirable in the president of the United States.

NAME YOUR MAN!

From the Scranton Times. The Scranton Tribune says: "If Pennsylvania shall want the best president, Pennsylvania is not the kind of state that cannot put up a rattling fight for it. That's certain." To which may pertinently be added that Pennsylvania has no lack of splendid presidential timber among the nearly 250,000 Republican majority that overwhelmed Democracy in November. And furthermore, by the same token, that as for many years the banner Republican state of the Union, no other state has an equal claim upon Pennsylvania for its splendidly furnished the next Republican president. Can a single word of all this be disputed?

A Good Time to Be Prudent.

The Wilkes-Barre Record, concluding another interesting and timely dissection of the inequalities of the present moss-covered senatorial apportionment, thinks that "if the subject of apportionment could be let out, as the constitution practically contemplated, to a set of expert accountants, the districts to be adjusted on the principle of numbers, instead of the profits and losses in partisan politics, or of local or personal influence or prestige, it would be about a half day's job to fix up either the judicial, representative, senatorial or congressional at a cost not exceeding $7.50 each, the odd cents for stationery to figure on. But as it is ordinarily done by legislative houses there is an endless intricacy of political bargaining, at an enormous cost, with a most unsatisfactory general result."

This, then, is a good time to impress upon the incoming legislature the fact that it will be expected to include the needs of the people in its consideration of the apportionment question, as well as the wishes of the politicians. The Republican party is pretty well grounded in Pennsylvania, these days. It needn't fear that the enemy will steal a march on it, during the approaching biennial session. Therefore, if it would retain its strength it must remember the source whence that strength came, and not be too eager to dance to the selfish quickstep of some third-rate party boss.

The decision of the Georgia legislature not to vote an appropriation for the Georgia national guard is probably the outcome of Populistic prejudice. It is to be hoped that Georgia will not have occasion, during the next year, to repent its folly.

We Need a School Census.

In his recent annual report State Superintendent Schaeffer pays a neat compliment to Representative Farr when he pronounces the introduction of the Farr free text-book bill "the most important step in the direction of educational progress during the past quarter of a century." He testifies that it has led to largely increased attendance—in some districts the increase rose as high as 20 per cent.—that it has facilitated better grading and that it has materially improved the quality of the educational work done in our public schools.

The superintendent earnestly advocates the taking of a thorough school census—one which will not simply ascertain how many persons there are in Pennsylvania between the ages of 6 and 21 years; but how many there are, say between 7 or 8 and 14 years, who ought to be in school but are not there. Such a census would be of direct and decisive value in its re-inforcement of the argument for a compulsory education law, inasmuch as it would afford authoritative data for comment upon the present custom of forcing people to pay school taxes when many of the persons for whose education these taxes are exacted are not receiving one farthing's worth of benefit therefrom.

Quite the weakest plea anywhere advanced in this connection is that compulsory education would overwork the schools—just as if the state of Pennsylvania were not rich and broad-minded enough to build new schools when needed. The taking of a proper school census would show just where new schools would be needed, under a compulsory law, and it would then be in order for school boards to build them. There are many things in Superintendent Schaeffer's report worthy of consideration, but easily the most opportune suggestion in it is that urging a thorough and comprehensive school enumeration.

While the National guard of Pennsylvania entertains the pleasantest wishes for the success of Governor-elect Hastings' incoming administration, it should not be asked to attend his inauguration. One regiment from each brigade would be a sufficient representation.

POLITICAL POINTS.

There are only nine male deputy factory inspectors in this state. Four out of the thirteen deputies are required to be women.

At a recent meeting of the Berks county Republican league a resolution electing Senator J. Donald Cameron to honorary membership was unanimously adopted.

The Pennsylvania congressional delegation will endorse ex-postmaster W. W. Johnson, of Baltimore, for postmaster of the house of representatives of the Fifty-fourth congress.

Luzerne county will present the name of Benjamin F. Davis, of Freeport, as a candidate for sergeant-at-arms of the house at Harrisburg. Mr. Davis would make an excellent official.

Chairman Porter, of the Philadelphia city committee, denies that the Quaker City Republican delegation to Harrisburg will undertake to tamper with the Brooks high license law.

Charles E. Voorhes is a leading candidate for the just-vacated chief clerkship of the Philadelphia common council, a position worth $2,000 a year. If George W. Kochersperger, the present assistant chief clerk, is promoted, Voorhes will get Kochersperger's place, which is worth $2,500.

The papers in John B. Blair's contest of Harry White's election as president judge of the Fortieth judicial district allege bribery, and illegal votes by non-registered men, and by persons who had not paid their tax. White had $7 plurally whereas Hastings had 2,000. Blair claims a recount will give him 239 plurality.

Friends of Dr. H. D. Heller, of Hellertown, have instituted proceedings in the Northampton county court to contest the election of Edward H. Laibach to the state senate. Laibach had 22 plurality. Heller specifies where 62 votes for Laibach were cast by men who lived outside the district in which the votes were cast. The hearing will be before Judge Schuyler, Dec. 17. This may lead to other contests.

The joke of the season is the movement of certain Democratic members-elect of the next house at Harrisburg to combine to prevent the selection of Poehorn John H. Fow, of Philadelphia, as the Democratic caucus nominee for speaker against Harry Walton. There are only twenty-nine Democrats in all yet, and are already in the field for speakership honors—Representatives Schwartz, of Monroe; Smiley, of Clarion; Fritz, of Columbia; Herzog, of Luzerne. Mr. Schwartz has written to a number of Democratic members-elect soliciting their support and suggesting that the country members organize against Philadelphia. Smiley's contract as in charge of Adjutant General Greenland.

GET A PAID DEPARTMENT.

Wilkes-Barre Times: "The Scranton authorities are waking up to the necessity of a paid fire department and there is good prospect that this time the agitation will amount to something. Their volunteer department is now costing them about $16,000 a year. It is proposed to put about $55,000 in a paid department. There is no manner of doubt that the efficiency of the service will be increased in an equal or even greater proportion than the cost. The lack of proper fire extinguishing facilities has been one of Scranton's greatest drawbacks in the eyes of the progressive outside world and the sooner the thing is remedied the better for the city and her real estate owners who are now paying all too high insurance rates, just on account of the absence of a paid department of trained fire fighters."

Wilkes-Barre News-Dealer: "Scranton is about to take another forward step in progress, in a paid fire department, to go into effect at the ensuing fiscal year. The volunteer department that Scranton has is one of the most efficient in the state, but a paid service would in some respects be far more satisfactory."

Wilkes-Barre Record: "Scranton is to have a paid fire department. This is putting on metropolitan airs denied a city with an antiquated charter."

The Cartoon Wasn't Far Off.

From the Olyphant Record. If the sessions of the Pittston council are judged from the cartoon published last Monday in the Scranton Tribune, they are most lively and interesting. If measures are not turned out, men are anywhere with the help of aggressive men the town should flourish.

"FOR THE SONG'S SAKE."

Would you wear the poet's crown or laurel, Follow in the path of the Immortals? Hard the path, O friend, wherein you Journey! Long the way and stained with drops of anguish, For the thorns lie thick amid the roses.

You have need of courage and resistance, Bitter need for hope and tireless patience, Faith unshaken, settled resolution, In a restless world this star, sure-centered, Boundless love and pity for your brothers, This the path which leads to the immortals.

Turn aside from selfish hope of guerdon; Fame forever flies the arms would clasp He who sings for fame pursues a shadow, Hampering vestments may awhile delay you, Gaudy garments of the mob's approval, Self-complacent praises gaily tithed— These shall flutter and awhile delay you, Rise and cast them from you as a mantle!

For the song's sake only, O my brother, Pour your soul; and if no mortal listen, Sing; the song returns unto the singer, Sing the love and sorrow of the mortal; Sing the hope and weakness of the human; Though you pour your hoard upon a desert, Give, nor dream of recompense hereafter, Give from pity all your songs of gladness, Give from love most infinite and tender, Living words of love for love's sake only, Self-surrendering, in that loss we triumph, Through this path we pass to the immortals. — Chicago Inter-Ocean.
